

Interdenominational
Cooperation Fund

DID YOU KNOW?

Being a global church means you have to be concerned about the well-being of other Christians around the world.

The Interdenominational Cooperation Fund enables United Methodists to share a presence and a voice in the activities of several national and worldwide ecumenical organizations. It provides the United Methodist share of the basic budgets of these organizations. Together we stand as an ecumenical front to globally make a difference.

Even though our customs may differ, promoting basic human rights in every corner of the world is the basic mission of the Interdenominational Cooperation Fund. Support for this fund helps Christians around the world stand together for those who are marginalized and persecuted for speaking about their faith.

In 1952, the General Conference agreed to share with other organizations in the basic budget to help provide for the National Council of Churches and World Council of Churches. The General Council of Bishops make recommendations for this fund.
